Air in a can? Seriously?

Do you think the air in your city is polluted? Then you may want to breathe in some pure air from a can. No, this is not an April Fool's joke. This is a real project started by Chinese businessman Chen Guangbiao. Believe it or not, he has already sold a thousand cans for $ 0.80 a piece!

They sell such cans in some of China's major cities like Shanghai. Sellers say that the air in the cans is collected from the few areas of China that, according to the billionaire, still have unpolluted air. The producer says that he has come up with a technologically advanced process of canning air.

The user has just to enjoy the fresh air experience. And of course, since the air is compressed inside, people can enjoy it slowly for a long time, even after they have opened the can.

The Chinese billionaire has come up with this rather unusual business to try to convince the government to help solve the air pollution problem.

So the question is, if we all continue to ignore air pollution, will fresh air become a norm in our shopping baskets? Then the cans of it after we have "drunk" it all will turn into tons of the garbage. What do you think?

1. The new project is started by Chinese government. T/F
2. The air is collected from major cities. T/F
3. People don't want to buy canned air because it is expensive. T/F
4. The project has become internationally popular. T/F
5. The project is a kind of protest against ignoring the problem of air pollution. T/F
